In 2000 research on The Value of Project Management, only 47% of companies had a project office. By 2006, the study of Project Management: The State of the Industry showed that 77% of companies had PMOs. In 2010, The State of the PMO research shows that 84% of companies have PMOs, with another 10% planning to implement one within a year. The survey also indicated that the PMO has become a valued strategic partner to senior executives, expanding their influence up to top management.

Today, PMO's need to support high value strategic initiatives, helping organisations to transform and to maximize benefits realisation. So what are the characteristics of those PMO's? How can they help organisations achieve their strategic goals and objectives? What are the risks and challenges associated with implementing those PMO's?

Join in on this terrific workshop to gain valuable insights on proven approaches to well organised and implemented PMO's, and how they can add real value to your organisation. The workshop includes thought-leadership and scene setting to provide strong context plus group case study exercises, coaching sessions and one-on-one dialogue.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?
This workshop targets EPMO/PMO leaders, organizational change leaders, portfolio and programme managers, PMO resources, project managers and consultants who are seeking ways to improve organizational effectiveness through nimble and 'lite' approaches.

BENEFITS TO YOU

By the end of this class you should be better able to:

- Understanding the role of PMO and its strategic value to an organization;
- Gained a deeper understanding of business aspects associated with the need for transformational change, value management and benefits realization;
